In Sanzi's paintings, we can always see some white mini figures. Some visitors think they look like white rice cakes, some think they are white stones. But it was actually inspired by the Chinese scholars who seek for peaceful life in a utopia.

Traditionally, Chinese scholars wear white clothes and white or black head scarf. However, the artist chooses white head scarf for his mini figures because white means purity in China. It is a metaphor that best describes Sanzi's pure and respectful mind while he sees nature and as an incarnation of his fantasy.
